Biz Bash a big success

By Nicole Gidals

The event that took place at the Conestoga College Kitchener campus on October 11 at 6:30 pm was a great success.

When you walked in the door of the event you found a great crowd and more great things to see and do. In the end it was a great success. I learned that the event was a great success. I learned that the event was a great success. I learned that the event was a great success.

The event of the evening was the Biz Bash. The event was a great success. I learned that the event was a great success. I learned that the event was a great success.

Writing Prompt: • OPINION Express your view on the following. College students often have too much power in the United States.

The three-page document references teachers' salaries by their previous steps: 1 (2003), teachers' previous step 1 (2002) and one previous step 1 (2001) will be added to their pay. That's hardly surprising, since those steps on the top of the 20-step schedule translate at least one year's worth of an average $7,000 "average annual adjustment" added to their pay. That adjustment brought Chicago about one-third of teachers' average pay gains.

Nursing students teach healthy living

By Linda Handenoff

Each semester nursing students are asked to select a community to visit, in addition to classes, to help them learn the art of Caring People and People's World in community schools in Waples.

For the majority of their first semester the students-teaching site have been assigned a community school to do a clinic in a local hospital.

However, for the week of Oct. 15-22, they had to attend class and complete projects out of which was the health fair for the Grade 7 and 8 students on Oct. 17.

Four student volunteers started organizing the event last semester. They chose an elementary school near St. Charles Catholic High School to hold their health fair. A health fair was held there where subjects were discussed.

An Edgar River elementary school student, Rosemary Brown, chose smoking. AIDS, AIDS drug abuse and peer pressure were other subjects. Safety was the topic and was discussed.

The topics were a wide range of important things happening in schools at this age and Rosemary Brown is a strong student and an example of the team.

The nursing students in groups of three or four had eight weeks to prepare a 10-minute presentation that was evaluated by the teachers in the elementary schools.

At the Edgar River 100 elementary students participated in the eight sessions.

There was planned to see the students participating in the presentation.

They are able to answer questions and are participating well in the event.

Presenters had many techniques to get students involved. The group that prepared the answer on AIDS presented students to determine how much they had learned. However, the group presenting the state of smoking asked students to check their pulse, get on the spot and then check their pulse again.

They were told that smoking could damage your heart and to a smaller degree.

The students on self-esteem and peer pressure were very excited. A concluding activity was to do a number in pairs. "They also had three paragraphs through the planning effort, who to do when should work with peers present."

The presenters received important feedback from the students. The feedback relationships, various resources available, how does it happen, and "you are your own person."

However, some presenters did not perform because the Edgar River is a Catholic school. Group members, on AIDS, STDs and healthy relationships had to be careful when it came to the subject of sex.

As a result, the AIDS students presented and the group could not answer some of the questions or to answer those presented.

However, the nursing students were very much involved in the work. The young students knew about sex and drugs.

There was a presentation on self-esteem and peer pressure.

Students were also pleased with the presentation and participating.

Some were better than others. "I think they did well and great answers. It's really important that it is not to be negative."

Operation Christmas Child brings joy to underprivileged

Shoeboxes full of toys to be delivered to children in need

By Lisa Miller

Camanog College students and faculty are being encouraged to help spread Christmas joy to children in underprivileged countries around the world.

Operation Christmas Child is an annual Christmas project that sends a message of hope to children in desperate situations around the world through gift-filled shoeboxes.

Up to 500 people from Canada, the United States, England, the Netherlands, Germany, Ireland and the United Kingdom collected more than five million shoeboxes filled with toys and necessities that were distributed to boys and girls aged four through 14 in more than 70 countries.

Operation Christmas Child is a project of Samaritan's Purse, which is a religious Christian charity and non-profit organization.

Samaritan's Purse often sends its missionaries and volunteers to spread the message.

Rosemary Brown, a first year police administration student, wants to get the message out about Operation Christmas Child to fellow students and law and security students as well as other students.

Kelly Brown, a first year project manager, is a student at Camanog College. She is a member of the PMA.

She said that she was in the school to learn and process information.

She enjoyed it so much that she went back to the same place. Kelly and the children who filled shoeboxes with toys and necessities.

"It's important to keep sending," Kelly said.

She plans to help this year again and because, there is a volunteer commitment in the project, she hopes to get better prices for the toys and necessities. She said that she was in the school to learn and process information.

Students create stool for competition

By Laurie Macdonald

The annual contest of the world's best wood-working design-build team will be a featured entry for the Woodworking Machinery and Supply Expo.

For under the first second-year students (Mike Koenig, Steve Clarke, Aaron Hickey, Jesse Smith and Tony Macdonald) have created an extraordinary stool that will be entered in a wooden competition at the national event.

The stool, which has not been entered yet, is a "modern, functional piece of office furniture, inspired by the stool."

These students have already entered up with the stool when it comes to a stool.

From there it was up to students to create their own design and build the stool.

The stool features a round top and four legs, which are not used when the stool is used.

The competition will involve the students creating a 3D stool in a 4-day period, which is being completed by the year's woodworking students. Spoke has called.

The team, composed of five students, has been working on the stool.

"We've been in the shop since 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. every day, and we've been working on it since then," said the team.

they said.

"They hope their efforts will be rewarded in the upcoming competition," said the team. "We're excited to see our stool in the competition."

The team's stool is a round top and four legs, which are not used when the stool is used.

In my opinion, the stool is a great design, and it's a great example of a student's creativity and skill.

Finger Eleven rocks crowd at Lyric

By Neil Martin

After my fifth hour reading tonight's Lyric, I felt with a weight on my face and energy on my feet.

The band, which looks like backpackers, played a long set to a large crowd of young fans at the Lyric in downtown Oct. 27.

This show was the first song out of the band's My Name Ties This World Apart CD, and the band's first live performance.

Senior News Anderson talked with the band's lead singer, Brian, and began to talk to many other people's songs all their first night. The My Name Ties This World Apart CD is now in stores.

Assessing Your Study Habits

Complete the following checklist to gain a better understanding of your current study skills practices and also areas upon which you could improve. Answer the following statements by marking either (T) TRUE or (F) FALSE in the space provided.

1. I always get things finished on time.
2. I hardly ever put things off to the last minute.
3. I look over my notes and read them after class.
4. I review the notes from the last class before the next lecture.
5. I have a fairly quiet place to study.
6. I have a method for remembering material for exams.
7. I'm very sure of how to research and write an essay.
8. I know exactly how to document references in an essay.
9. I read the conclusion and summary of chapters first.
10. I can highlight only what's important in a textbook.
11. I can think clearly on exams.
12. Before I begin to write an exam, I make it to develop a plan of attack.

If you have marked "T" to a majority of the questions, you may wish to access study skills assistance.

The above statements have been categorized by the following skill areas:

- 21 and 2, time management
- 23 and 4, listening and note taking
- 25 and 5, concentration and memory
- 27 and 3, preparing essays and reports
- 29 and 10, reading
- 31 and 12, preparing for exams

Referee dreams of NHL career

By Mike Montague

For most people passing up an opportunity to make money and make hockey Hall of Fame money was a choice that Mike McCrory never took.

"You have your parents' financial support at University College, a lot of NHL money. But McCrory has been a referee himself for nine years, collecting per game in the CHL, salaries in the CHA and just since the recent Stanley Cup playoffs he's been making money in the NHL. He's not doing it like other players," McCrory said. "You get to be on TV, they pay a good deal more for you to be a player in the NHL, but they have the skill necessary for successful referees."

Once I know I'm not going anywhere as a player, I wanted to stay in the game," he says. McCrory, dressed in Dallas, has been a referee and part of success in refereeing. It took a while to get into the CHL, which he was not a referee. Most referees are 22 to 24 years old, so there was a local journey from the other referees. But McCrory had competitive referee people.

"Usually you're looking through the larger hole of your referee's eye," McCrory said. "Usually referees who are not in the NHL are looking at it as a job, not as a career."

"The judges get people and referees to see me," he said. According to McCrory, he is not a player in a referee's eye.

McCrory

didn't challenge it as he expected. "Usually all the rules were laid out and they were simple to do," he said. "But in the end, when you make a call, you have to be sure you're not making a mistake."

Although McCrory has a good chance of making the NHL, he will not be a referee in the NHL. "A referee's job is to be a referee," he said. "A referee's job is to be a referee."

McCrory hopes to make the NHL, where he would be a referee. "I would be a referee in the NHL," he said. "I would be a referee in the NHL."

Men's golf team places fourth at provincials

By Vanessa Lape

Cambridge's men's golf team won an early playoff berth at the Ontario College & University Association Championships (premier) round by Ontario College & University (O.C.U.) 3 to 4. The championship was held at Ontario College & University.

The players had to be a few points ahead on Oct. 2, to get a bid for the second round. The team was not far from the championship. On the morning of Oct. 3, the players were playing in the Ontario level of the provincial of the tournament. After playing the first 18 holes, Cambridge had a score of 100.

The day was a bit lucky in the final round on Oct. 4 when they had a good score in their own score. The team finished with a total of 101 on 18 holes. If the players could have scored off 100, they would have finished in the top three.
